

For this brief I had many troubles thinking of an idea, one being what annoyed me/ what am I so passionate about? As I moved on with making my animation and planning for it, I decided to go with the idea of fever dreams.
My idea would be how a fever dream would work, when you try to plug in your charger to the plug and it just will not go in it would be going around it and keep missing the socket to the point where you would get so irritated that you would wake yourself up and force yourself to rethink the dream properly.
By using the other skills, I had learnt from previous rotations such as sound, character design, story writing and motion graphics, I produced my final idea of how a fever dream works. I wanted it to be still done in 2d, but I did not want that much animation to go into it, more like taking inspiration from an anime called the way of the househusband. I drew separate pieces of my main character and colored them in whilst editing them onto after-effects.I added my own voice overs and asked my friend to help me with a few voice overs and to add to it as well.
